How to verify your information

This document shows you how to certify important documents and prove who you are through proof of identity.

It’s important we can confirm your information is genuine and can verify we’re talking with the right person. It may seem strict, but these steps are necessary to avoid the wrong people accessing your money.

Providing proof of your identity (POI)

Some transaction requests must be supported by proof of identity (POI) documents that have been certified correctly. For example, if you wish to:

1. apply for a benefit payment, including a transfer to another fund if you don’t provide your tax file number or the other fund is a self-managed super fund
2. apply to open an income stream account
3. advise a change of name.

If you transfer money from another fund, they may also need your certified POI documents if you haven’t provided your TFN to that fund or they’re unable to verify your identity. These documents should be sent directly to your other fund.

Certifying your proof of identity doesn’t have to be complicated:

1. Collect your originals
   A list of the acceptable POI documents is shown below.

2. Photocopy your originals

3. Have your copies certified
   Take both your copies and original documents to a person who can certify documents. A list of certifiers, inside and outside Australia is included over the page.

If the document and/or the certification is not written in English, it must be accompanied by an English translation prepared by a translator accredited by the National Accreditation Authority for Translators and Interpreters Ltd (NAATI).

NOTE: The proof of identity requirements are slightly different if you’re outside Australia.
Acceptable POI documents

To prove your identity, you can provide either:

ONE certified document from List A

OR

ONE certified document from List B

PLUS

ONE certified document from List C.

List A

- A current Australian state/territory driver’s licence containing your photograph.
- An Australian passport.
- A current Australian state/territory proof of age card containing your photograph.
- A current passport, similar travel document or national identity card issued by a foreign government department, the UN or an agency of the UN, containing your photograph and either your signature or a unique identifier.

List B

- An Australian birth certificate or extract issued by a state or territory.
- A citizenship certificate issued by the Commonwealth.
- A current Centrelink pension card that entitles you to receive financial benefits.

List C

- A notice issued by the Commonwealth or a state or territory government within the last 12 months showing your name and current residential address and the provision of financial benefits to you e.g. Centrelink letter.
How to certify your documents

All copied pages of original personal identity documents (including any change of name documents) must be certified as true copies by an authorised person with the appropriate qualifications or registration (see below) who cannot be the owner or addressee of the document.

The authorised person must sight the original and the copy to ensure the documents are identical, then certify each page by writing “I certify that this document is a true copy of the original”, followed by their signature, printed name, address, qualification (e.g. justice of the peace, Australia Post employee), registration number (if applicable) and date.

People who can certify documents if you’re in Australia

The following lists a subset of people who are authorised to witness your signature on a statutory declaration as well as certify copies of original documents. For a complete list of authorised witnesses/certifiers, go to the Attorney-General’s Department website at www.ag.gov.au.

- Australia Post employee in charge of an office providing postal services (charges may apply)
- chiropractor
- dentist
- financial adviser or financial planner

People who can certify documents if you’re outside Australia

The following people can certify copies of the originals:

- a public notary or other person authorised to administer an oath or affirmation or to authenticate documents in the country you are visiting or living in.
- The professions listed above if you’re in Australia can only certify documents outside Australia if they work or are registered in Australia. Where your documents are certified outside Australia, the certifier must quote their registration number or the relevant law that qualifies them to authenticate your documents.

Samantha Sample has provided a copy of her identification. It includes her signature, full name, date of birth and current residential address.

The authorised person has sighted the original identification and confirmed that the copy is a true copy.

Details for the authorised person to include are full name, address, qualification, registration number (if applicable), date and signature.

I certify that this document is a true copy of the original.

If you have previously provided certified POI

If you have already provided a certified copy of your document(s), you don't have to provide it again unless your name or residential address have changed. If these have changed since you originally provided certified documents, you'll need to resupply certified evidence of the change(s).

If your residential address has changed

You'll need to provide a certified copy of a relevant ID document showing your new residential address. If it’s more convenient, you can provide the original (rather than a certified copy) of a recent notice issued by your local council or a recent utilities bill addressed to you at your current residential address.

If your name has changed

You’ll need to provide a certified copy of a document that links your name in our records to the new name on your identity document(s). Your ID documents must be issued by a government department or agency.

If you're outside Australia your ID document(s) must be issued by an Australian and/or foreign government department, the UN or an agency of the UN.
